

Oil companies told: Hold off your greed

Ombudsman Gutierrez's director rights were violated "in the name of politics" and that she expects fair treatment from the House justice committee.

By Tilly Garcia and Amy R. Rene

Oil companies are exploiting the unrest in the Arab world to raise pump prices of gasoline way beyond their purchasing cost to fill their own pockets, says Ombudsman Gutierrez.

"They bought these oil cheap from the cheapening very high and they're using that measure of the middle east crisis and because the oil prices are going up today," Reyes said.

He pointed out that these "to hold off their greed even if it would be a later attempt to show to the public that they are really sensitive to the people already in distress."

On March 1, amid the unrest in Libya and other oil-producing countries, oil companies raised up the prices of gasoline by P1.25 per liter and by P1 per liter for diesel, further increasing the burden on Filipino consumers.

Gutierrez is now asking if these three OPEC oil suppliers—Saudi Arabia, Iraq and Venezuela—have actually increased the price of oil.

She also asked on Tuesday prices of imported petroleum.

Merci's loyal dozen fail to stop impeach

House: 2 complaints sufficient in form

By EJC Calasag/Inquirer

IN THE END, the allies of Ombudsman Mercedes Gutierrez could not stop the impeachment judgment.

The majority of the House of Representatives' committee on impeachment proceeded to vote on the sufficiency of the two impeachment complaints filed against Gutierrez despite a plea from her lawyers and colleagues of "advising" by her constitutional allies.

With the 11-member majority voting 20-7 in favor of the impeachment process, Justice Rep. Abel Sison Jr., the committee chair, announced that the House was proceeding a general denial in Gutierrez' behalf on the impeachment complaints filed separately by a group led by former Attorney Rep. Jose Sison and another led by House Speaker, majority leader of the militant Bagong Alyanang Makabayan (BAM) Rep. Wilfredo Lim. $1,000 only a symbol but it still repairs roof

By Lela B. Salazar

THEY DO want $1,000 (P41,200) per person.

To several victims of human rights abuses committed during the martial law regime of Ferdinand Marcos, $1,000 is a big deal. It's a symbol of a broken road, a pay off, a debt, a bribe, or a gift to a member who suffered as he was wayward in the past.

The $1,000 represents some consolation given to a check to mark the nearly 10,000 victims as part of a settlement of a class action suit brought against the state and the family in a US court. Some money may come later, according to their lawyers, as they continue their legal fight.

NEARLY 10,000 Filipinos are on their way home from Libya, with more than 2,000 of them already out of the conflict-ridden North African country, the Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE) said yesterday.

The DOLE's Middle East Office Monitoring Center has identified 10,000 Filipinos who have already left Libya while 4,000 more are still waiting to be rescued, Labor Secretary Bernabe Go told.

Earlier, 1,500 Filipinos in Benghazi were reported to have been rescued and sent to the airport.

BATTLE FOR TRIPOLI: Gadhafi strikes back on 3 fronts

TRIPOLI, Libya—With sweeping victories in Tripoli, Gadhafi's forces are striking back on three fronts, with special forces, regular troops and fighter jets, but the rebels repelled the attacks in six hours of fighting, sources said.

The rebels, including the Libyan Army and armed with tanks, machine guns and anti-aircraft guns, fought back against Gadhafi's troops, which were moved on situations in the rebel-held areas, said 50 kilometers west of Tripoli.

Fighting a bloody campaign against the rebels, Gadhafi's forces launched an ammunition depot in the east.

Gadhafi's forces are growing in strength.

Chavit son resigns, finally

By Cynthia D. Webster

HONOLULU, Nov. 10 (AP) — Gov. Chum H. Chang yesterday handed over the resignation letter of his son, Rep. Ronald Chang, to House Speaker Felix Balboa Jr. in keeping with a promise made by the letter to vacate his congressional seat after he was convicted for drug trafficking in Hong Kong.

In his letter, Oswald Singer said he had come to the "painful decision" to give up his throne and not because he was too "cocking his" to the demands of a "young firm" in the chamber after years of devotion to his position.

He could see divisions were in the value of his father who had all the rights in protest made possible from congressmen. Because it was his name and brand that was essentially dragged over the business of his own doing."

At the House, Thurbert Hughes hit back at some of Ronald's congressional colleagues for insisting on expelling him despite Ronald's having announced earlier that he would resign.

He claimed, for one, was innocent and that he only pleaded guilty in order to get a much faster sentence.

Mr. Aquino said there is no plan for a housing project only for members of the PSG with the help of the National Housing Authority.

House vote to postpone ARMM polls draws near

By Cynthia D. Batata

TWO committees of the House of Representatives have approved the postponement of the elections for the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao (ARMM) set on Aug. 11 to synchronize it with the national and local elections in 2013.

The committees on suffrage and election reform passed House Bill No. 4147 calling for the postponement separately by a vote of 23-4 and 13-8, respectively, last week. The bill will now be referred for plenary deliberation and voting.

The bill was backed by 54 congressmen, led by Majority Leader and Calabarzon City Rep. Benigno Aquino III.

The deliberation focused not only on the postponement of the ARMM elections but also on the constitutionality of appointing officers in charge to run the ARMM government.

House City Rep. Gale A. Noriega said the Department of Justice earlier expressed belief that appointing holdover officials in ARMM was unconstitutional as "there are no validly constituted officials in ARMM." He said the bill would have the effect of amending the Organic Law, or Republic Act No. 9054, which created the ARMM.

Noriega said postponing the ARMM elections until the 2013 elections and appointing OICs are not needed for the bill. He said the bill also fits the quick formation of OICs, which are also not in the last creation of ARMM.

Manila Rep. Ismael Baguing called for more public consultations to determine the acceptability to Muslim Filipinos of the postponement.

"Call assembly members of Congress not to be busy," said Baguing.

"We must invite back to the committee hearings and Muslim lawmakers who had walked out," he said.

Baguing said while members of Congress represent constituents, the people must be directly consulted.

House Speaker Jose De Venecia said the bill would have the effect of amending the Organic Law, or Republic Act No. 9054, which created the ARMM.

not by Muslim lawmakers during the committee hearing on the postponement over its perceived intruding by Christian lawmakers.

"Misleading is treating us dangerous when here," he added.

Deputy Speaker Pablo Garcia of Cebu, defending the postponement, said the bill was not an amendment of the law that created ARMM but of another that fixed the date for elections in the autonomous region.

Don McLean sings today at Big Dome

By Pocholo Cataquilan
Illustration

DON McLEAN has an idea why his songs will resonate among a lot of people, including some of today's youth eager to not lose perform.

"First, I believe I made good records, and these records fortunately had commercial appeal, people wanted to hear them," the American singer-songwriter told the Inquirer in shortly after arriving from Singapore for his concert tonight at the Inquirer Coliseum.

"Second," he added, "the songs were very aware of the times they came out. But they still sound universal after four years later. They weren't the 'simple kind of songs'."

McLean, now 60, whose voice doesn't seem to have been too adversely affected by time, was referring to the times that made him one of the most popular figures of the folk rockers in the 1970s. Two of the songs, "American Pie" and "Vincent," became top hits not long after they were released.

"American Pie" spent four months at No. 1 on the Billboard chart in 1970.

Behind analysis

The song is noticeable not only for its unusual length of nine right minutes, but mostly due to its evoking story about growing into the world of rock 'n' roll, war, drugs, and the passing of the 60s era. Its lyrics prompted curiosity and were readily scrutinized by fans and scholars.

Commenting on the attention that his lyrics had attracted, McLean said in a past interview: "They're beyond analysis. They're poetry."

Indeed, much of the beauty of McLean's songs could be seen through their carefully crafted lines.

"Vincent," which also soared to No. 1 in the United Kingdom in 1970, was inspired by the star Vincent van Gogh's painting "The Starry Night." Its lyrics describe the painting itself ("Starry, starry night, paint your words like rain...") and Van Gogh's own loneliness ("How you suffered for your sanity").

Other McLean compositions that have stood in the memory of millions of people include "And Love Was on the Beach," a 1971 tribute to Betty Crocker, and famously covered by Glen Hughes in a 1980 cover. Other songs include "Crazy" (written by Campbell and Roger Miller), "Wonderful World," a No. 1 hit on the Billboard Easy Listening chart; "If You See" (1968); "I've got you on the brain, I love you so much..."; and "Silent Tears" (1970). "I would say the thought, it wouldn't be the same...".

McLean says that songs do not necessarily become hits to other people.

"For example, the guy who started these great times that he was followed by saying that I wrote called 'Vincent' and it was a hit song. It's the idea of the song that influences a person to do something that could possibly change the world. It has taken time to change the thinking of his. What a composer has to do is not the things that matter, write about some great, political or otherwise, and they will be these people," he said.

La Nina weakens but rains linger

By Richard L. Kline

LA NINA is weakening, but the country will continue to receive above normal rainfall in the otherwise-dry months of March and April, the state weather agency said yesterday.

Philippine Bureau of Meteorology, Geophysical and Astronomical Services Administration (PAGASA), said the El Niño and Madden, which have been above normal rainfall since December, will receive more precipitation in the next two months.

In the past few days, some areas in the Tagalog and Mindanao received as much precipitation because of low pressure areas. Today, Palawan is getting rain because of an LPA. Meanwhile, a rain-bearing after the convergence of Pagasa's low-level monsoon equipment.

The LPA was located 200 kilometers east of Puerto Princesa City on Tuesday morning. The La Niña weather phenomenon returns when the surface temperature of the Pacific Ocean gets cooler, bringing about normal rainfall. The opposite, El Niño, occurs when the temperature of the ocean gets warmer, causing a dry spell.

Servicio said the La Niña this year...which the World Meteorological Organization had warned would be very strong...peaked in January and February.

Agencia's Bureau of Meteorology coincided with this observation.

According to a recent agency update, "The El Niño phenomenon, most notably below the surface, have warmed, while at the surface, indicators such as the southern oscillation index, trade winds and cloud patterns have moved from their respective positions recently."

Pagasa previously inaugurated new wind and temperature measuring equipment that would provide additional data for meteorological forecasts.

Officials of Pagasa and the Department of Science and Technology unveiled a P14 million Finnish-made wind profiler at the Pagasa Science Center in Puerto City.

Condo cleanup hits a snag

By Tina G. Santos and Amy R. Rivera

THE MAKATI City government has expressed alarm over the continuous accumulation of water mixed with oil at the basement of the West Tower Condominium in Ilustrado Alangal.

At the same time, it appeared to the Licensed First Philippine Industrial Corp. (FPIC) that the water is a potential problem which may lead to the collapse of the oil that had been leaking into the condominium basement since late last year, to submit a handful of the damaged floor in the area.

The Department of Environment and Natural Resources (DENR) earlier ordered the management of the building to stop dumping the basement because the condition of the floor is not safe for the residents to use.

"We have received information that the water is already reaching the third basement level," said Amy Rodriguez, the city public works bureau officer.

The 23-story building on Ortigas Highway has a four-level basement.

Rodriguez was quick to add, however, that the city government could not take over the property since West Tower is a private establishment.

"We hope that the FPIC and the building management could immediately remove the water," she said.

BSP raises capital requirements for thrift banks

Increased rates apply only to new, converting banks

By Michelle V. Banao

THE BANGKOD-based BSP is increasing the minimum capital requirements for thrift banks in line with efforts to further strengthen the banking sector.

The new capitalization requirements, however, apply only to new thrift banks, existing banks converting into thrift banks and thrift banks relocating head offices to areas falling under higher classification.

The adjustments vary depending on the location of the bank's head office.

The required capital for banks with head offices in Metro Manila was increased to P1 billion from P500 million.

For those with headquarters in the cities of Cebu and Davao, the level was raised to P500 million from only P250 million.

For CDO banks with head offices in other areas, the level was increased to P250 million from P100 million.

Banks headquartered in other Manila areas are capped at higher minimum capitalization requirement on the assumption that their coverage is bigger volumes of transactions.

"The new minimum capital requirements for thrift banks are to further boost the capital base of the thrift banking system, as well as provide area residents to adequately take up the risks inherent to the increasingly sophisticated banking business and effectively compete with existing banks," the BSP said in a statement.

The move followed a similar capital requirement increase imposed on local banks starting November last year.

The BSP said the increase in capitalization requirements were consistent with global efforts to enhance bank regulation to avoid banking-related crises in the future.

Meant to update international regulatory standards came amid the latest global economic turmoil, which analysts said stemmed from bank failures in the United States.

BSP Deputy Governor Rector E. Arellano Jr. said the banking system in the Philippines, compared with those in industrialized Western countries, was stronger given their higher liquidity, lower exposure to bad debts and the efficiency of their capitalization.

Arellano said it was prudent to continuously update domestic regulatory standards given the ever-changing risk faced by the banking sector.

Philippine banks are likewise directed to put up capitalization area, or for non-thrift financial institutions, to ensure other risks are being managed and to avoid defaults by borrowers, starting this year.

Under the Revised Capital Adequacy Assessment Program (RCAP), the BSP requires banks to submit a list of assets and the corresponding risks these exposures are exposed to, and to put up a more spending capitalization.

Log ban suspension sought

By Angel L. Ho

NOTED: The owners of local wood products, the Philippine Exporters' Confederation Inc. (Philexport) is seeking the suspension of an executive order to drastically increase logging activities in the country.

A position paper submitted to Executive Secretary Pagpat Ochoa last week stated that EO 23 would deprive at least P3 million Filipinos who directly and indirectly relied on the about 25,000 hectares and farming activities in the country for their livelihood.

The position paper, the Philexport group indicated, would cause a shortage of wood supply effectively taking away the livelihood of farmers and fishers.

According to Philippine Wood Products Association Director Romeo Perez, the issuance of EO 23 last month had already caused prices of lumber and plywood to spike as much as 25.5 percent.

The quarter-inch plywood is 5-millimeter board, for example, rose to P104 per board, from only P250-P260 per board in January of EO 23.

The marketing prices and impending shortfall in wood supply would have caused local industries to downsize or even operations altogether, Philexport said. This would not only result in job loss, but also in foreign revenue for the government in the form of taxes that should have been paid by wood-based companies and their employees.

The group described EO 23 as "un-phased," saying it would only drive wood-based enterprises out of business without really addressing the root cause of flooding.

During a study conducted by the Food and Agriculture Organization, the expert group said massive floods were caused by the large volume of rainfall applied to a forest change and the infrastructure constructed for commercial use.

If the government would want to keep EO 23 in place, it would have to clearly "gray areas" in the implementation of the order, as the implementing rules and regulations in a department administrative order.

PLDT posts modest growth

In '10, telco's income rose by a mere 1% to P40B

By Paolo G. Matibag

PHILIPPINE LONG DISTANCE TELEPHONE CO. (PLDT) posted a modest growth of 1% in its 2010 income, according to its annual report, which was released last week.

The company's income rose from P39.6 billion in 2009 to P40.1 billion in 2010. The increase was driven by higher revenue from its core business, long distance telephony, and its other businesses, such as mobile and internet services.

"We are pleased to report a modest growth in profitability during 2010," PLDT Chairman Manuel Pangalanan said in a statement.

The company's income rose from P39.6 billion in 2009 to P40.1 billion in 2010. The increase was driven by higher revenue from its core business, long distance telephony, and its other businesses, such as mobile and internet services.

BDO ends ties with Philam, firms up link with Generali

By Dean L. Lora

BANK OF DOGO (BDO) has ended its long-standing relationship with Philippine Amalgamated Bank (Philam) and is now a wholly owned subsidiary of Generali Bank AG.

The move was announced last week by BDO Chairman and CEO, Dean L. Lora. He said the bank had decided to end its relationship with Philam, which had been a major shareholder since its founding in 1961.

The bank's relationship with Philam had been a source of controversy for years, with critics accusing the bank of favoring its former parent. BDO's decision to end the relationship was seen as a move to strengthen its ties with Generali, which had acquired a 51% stake in the bank in 2009.

How to be a football parent

As FIBA executive-director of the 'Younghusband Football Academy' the only Filipino to be awarded the prestigious title of March Commissioner of the Year in 2006 by the Asian Football Confederation, and a coach in at least eight other elite footballs—Franky 18, Kicker, 14, and Junior, 14—Cebu Thracian-Filipino shares the benefits of football, and tips on how to get kids started on the sport.

Benefits

- In football, a child develops early team teamwork, discipline, leadership and communication, but also learn to respect authority to be the referee's decisions in every final.
- Kids learn to run properly for 10, and eat healthy, they learn how to hydrate themselves before, during and after each match or practice.

Getting started

- Start by showing interest in the sport. If a parent is not interested, the child won't be either.
- Match passion, games and football on TV with them. However, as a parent, we need to ensure no spectators and fans, and should not involve ourselves in technical issues with the coaches (unless we are asked).
- Parents should always respect coach's decisions. However, if you do not believe in a coach and his/her objectives for the team, it is your responsibility to move them.

How the Younghusbands were raised 'not just to be good athletes, but good people'

Thanks to folks who were there '24/7 for us, the football sensations grew up sheltered, disciplined and with no ails

SINCE I'm the youngest and the only girl among four siblings, my parents and brothers were always over-protective of me. When I was younger, I was sometimes out of rules. Then dad only for hours on rule, when dad set go to middle without a chapter, then dad set go to middle without a chapter, then dad set go to middle without a chapter.

Though I had three other, there was one thing I was never interested in pursuing my goals and dreams. Though I was happy for my parents to give them help but based on the football field, they knew the lesson I'd learn would be valuable for the rest of my life. Because, I know the parents play a huge role in their child's learning, rules or no rules.

Phil and Anna Younghusband's parents actually had the right formula. Incredibly famous Filipino football players who played for Chelsea FC, are part of the Philippine National Team, and participants of the Younghusband Football Academy down years great parents/athletes their mission.

"We had a comfortable life growing up," says Phil. "I think we were pretty spoiled. If we were something, we'd try to be it, and we were and that would be it for us. We had a good group of friends, we went to a good school, we lived in a nice area in the suburbs in London."

"Everything was just made easy for us."

Oscars fashion: Bonham Carter shocks in normal dress

HOLLYWOOD—Jenna Bonham Carter's stunning red to Gwyneth Paltrow's subtle black dress, all eyes were on the British actress in Hollywood's 83rd Oscars.

And so for the famously quirky British actress Bonham Carter—known for her role in the 1999 film Four Weddings and a Funeral—it was a surprise to see her in a red dress. “I thought it would be nice to celebrate this, so I thought, ‘I’ve got a bit of a complex about my hair so I thought I’d make it more leggy,’” she joked, shortly before the first Academy Awards show got under way.

Bonham Carter, who last and later is the best supporting actress category for her role in The Wings of the Dove, is known for her unpredictable dress sense and her love of elaborate costumes. “I’ve been told she’s a bit of a diva,” said one source.

At the Oscars, the actress and her hair, but not her hair, was the focus. “I thought it would be nice to celebrate this, so I thought, ‘I’ve got a bit of a complex about my hair so I thought I’d make it more leggy,’” she joked, shortly before the first Academy Awards show got under way.
